

As he entered the town, he could see that it was totally empty. The fairground was still there but no one was on the rides. As he walked on, he saw an old hotel. There were no birds in the sky. The trees were overgrown and they were sprouting up everywhere.

He continued on, past hospitals, schools and homes. All buildings had broken windows and they looked old and dirty.

Eventually, he reached the end of the street. He turned, and had one last look at the sad city. Then he turned back, and started walking away.

As he entered the town, he could see that it was totally empty. The fairground was still there but no one was on the rides. As he walked on, he saw an old hotel. There were no birds in the sky. The trees were overgrown and they were sprouting up everywhere.

He continued on, past hospitals, schools and homes. All buildings had broken windows and they looked old and dirty.

Eventually, he reached the end of the street. He turned, and had one last look at the sad city. Then he turned back, and started walking away.